

Haha - these now is a "rumbling", not a "rambling", as it's all about the earthquake

Picked from Facebook (FB)

Map I made up in my earlier email soon after earthquake struck

Road damage at Guihulungan, further north of La Libertad.

Broken glass windows at Dumaguete Mall, FB

Milling around at downtown Dumaguete, FB

My excerpted email 2 hours after Feb 6 noon earthquake:
 Not to worry. We all are OK. It hit at noon Monday, and was relatively strong, about 50 secs. Power went off. Then we went to check the church and it still was standing (remember how I've harped long and loud about how the priest removed all the 18 roof pillars 3 years ago). In Tanjay, no structural damage it seems. Thirty five minutes later, another strong after shock occurred, about 17 secs. Power came back in an hour.
 From news bits here and there, via text, phone and TV, epicenter was in the sea between Cebu and Negros, 6.8 on scale. Much stronger in north towns Tayasan, Jimalalud and La Libertad etc. Bodega in farm at La Libertad had walls collapse.
 There are tsunami warnings now for the next 2 hours.

Danny, 2/6/12 Monday 9 pm